

Biography

John Radigan was born and resides in Wickliffe, Ohio. He is an artist, lecturer and workshop instructor respected for his penetrating photographs and captivating print interpretations of nature's wonders. His artworks draw on sensibilities developed through years of creative experience in music, writing, and photography in revealing the inner song, the cry of our true nature that awakens in the presence of wildness.

He leads workshops throughout the year for various organizations including the Adirondack Photography Institute, Santa Fe Workshops, Cleveland Botanical Garden and Franklin Park Conservatory, enthusiastically sharing a wealth of practical experience while guiding participants in the process of uncovering, nurturing and expressing their own unique vision of the world. His informative and entertaining lectures explore the richness of the human/nature relationship through compelling imagery and thoughtful discourse.

John's work has received many awards and been exhibited in numerous solo and group exhibitions in venues such as Cleveland Botanical Garden (Cleveland, Ohio); Lake Placid Center for the Arts (Lake Placid, New York); Lake Metroparks (Kirtland, Ohio); Arts Center/Old Forge (Old Forge, New York); and the Fine Arts Association (Willoughby, Ohio). His images and writings will also appear in his upcoming book Beat of Adirondack Hearts.

His work can be found on the walls and in the collections of many corporations including Merrill Lynch, International Paper, Floraline Display Products, InfoRad, KeyCorp, Life Cycle Strategies, Mountainman Outdoor Supply, Peak Performance Sports Medicine, Prudential Insurance, Thrivent Financial and Xerox.
